

KEEP CALM & 'STACH ON

Wanna throw the mo-mazing Movember party ever? Of course you do! Olivedale's Karen Kelly brings in the big guns to show us how.

Gentlemen, step away from your razors. It's time to bid your clean-shaven face bye-bye and rock a 'stache for the 30 days of Movember. Challenge accepted? We thought so! While our Mo Bros are doing their bit to raise funds and awareness for prostate and testicular cancer and change the face of men's health, literally, (we'll gladly endure a month of itchy kisses for such a great cause), we moustache (see what we did there?) you gals a question. What are you planning to do? Only throw the mo-mazing mo party ever, of course! But before panic sets in ... we Mo Sistas ain't doing it by ourselves! We've brought in the big guns, Olivedale's Karen Kelly, who whipped out her little black book and, well ... brought in her big guns. We all know it takes an army to plan a memorable bash and luckily they've done all the work for us, sneaky, aren't we?

With a BSc Mathematical Sciences

degree and consulting position in an equity research company, Karen is our expert on everything 'lovilee' ... we'd understand if you thought things didn't quite add up. You see, Karen is not just a smarty pants she's also supercreative ... you only have to check out her blog, Lovilee, to confirm this! 'I started my blog (it was very informal) about three years ago because I wanted to share some of the DIY projects I did leading up to my wedding. To cut a long story short, I became good friends with my wedding photographer and collaborated to add a wedding section. Later, when my sister had a child I added a kids' section. My blog is aimed at brides, mummies, mummies-to-be and aspiring home decorators.' Browsing through these mo-tastic pics was just the kick in the pants we needed to get inspired, plan a Movember bash and well ... take our minds off our men looking like lumberjacks. Details: www.lovilee.co.za or @LovileeDsigns
